

Air Vent

Ventilation grilles allow the entry or exit of air both in the internal rooms of a building (such as air conditioning grilles and air conditioning grilles), and in the openings of the building that face the outside. They physically protect the ducts and, at the same time, allow the collection or distribution of air.

